

THE PALM BEACH POST • TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 2009

2 Minutes

From staff and wire reports

Who's in the news ...

World's fastest man adopts fast cat

NAIRRE Keryn — The world's fastest man adopted the animal kingdom's fastest feline Monday as Usain Bolt welcomed a new baby cheetah named Lightning Bolt into his life.

The Jamaican sprinter's sponsorship of the 3-month-old male cheetah is part of an effort to boost Keryn's conservation efforts of its famous wildlife, whose survival is threatened by hunting, climate change and human encroachment.

The world record-holding 100 and 200 meters paid $12,000 to formally adopt the cub. He also will pay $3,000 per year to care for Lightning Bolt, who will be raised at an animal orphanage in Nairobi.

The money will go to the Keryn Wildlife Service, and some will be used to protect Keryn's endangered species, KWS director Julius Kiprotich said.

Bolt, who was on a four-day visit to Keryn, said he was looking forward to seeing Keryn's diverse wildlife but was scared of meeting them.

He nearly ran away when asked Monday to pet a fully grown cheetah named Usain Bolt, who is a 3-month-old male cheetah he will be sponsoring to boost conservation efforts in Kenya.

2009 USAIN BOLT/USAIN BOLT

Ex-UK coach pleads guilty to DUI

LAWRENCEBURG, Ky. — Former University of Kentucky basketball coach Billy Gillispie pleaded guilty Monday to driving under the influence of alcohol and apologized for what he called a mistake.

Gillispie accepted a plea bargain, which included fines and court costs of more than $1,000, a 30-day suspension of his driver's license and an agreement to complete an Alcohol Drivers Education Program.

Gillispie, fired this year after two seasons with the Wildcats, was arrested Aug. 27 in Lawrenceburg and charged with DUI after refusing sobriety tests.

Sports agent can't decide on champ

Sports agent Mark Rodgers had quite a dilemma Monday night: two of the Palm City attorney's clients — pitchers A.J. Burnett of the New York Yankees and Cliff Lee of the Philadelphia Phillies — faced each other in Game 5 of the World Series.

"There's a huge amount of respect, but there's also that anxiety because one of them is going to be on the winning side of the most important game of his career and the other is going to be on the losing side in the most important game of his career," Rodgers said before the game.

Rodgers is one of three partners in Frontline Sports Management, whose clients include Marlins pitcher Andrew Miller and Astros pitcher Mike Hampton.

— Jon Caplan

Newspaper commits error, runs Phillies WS. champs ad

PHILADELPHIA — A Philadelphia newspaper has apologized to readers for mistakenly running an ad congratulating the Philadelphia Phillies on winning the World Series.

The New York Times' Yankees held a commanding 3-1 lead in the championship as of Monday, the day the ad was printed in The Philadelphia Inquirer.

The three-quarterpage Macy's ad is on the back of the front section.

The ad features a T-shirt with the Phillies logo, the commission's trophy and the phrase "Back to Back World Series Champions."

The Inquirer released a message to readers saying the paper deeply regrets the error.

This week's area schedules

Team	Time	Opponent	Location
Florida Panthers	7:00 p.m.	Carolina Hurricanes	Sun Life Center
Miami Heat	7:00 p.m.	Atlanta Hawks	BankAtlantic Center
Miami Dolphins	1:00 p.m.	San Francisco 49ers	Land Shark Stadium
University of Florida	7:00 p.m.	University of Miami	Stadium
Florida State University	7:00 p.m.	Florida Atlantic University	Stadium

Ailments, court keep Heat stars from practice

MIAMI — Dwyane Wade, Jermaine O'Neal and Shaquille O'Neal missed Monday's practice as the Miami Heat prepared for tonight's first game of the season by Steve Nash and the Phoenix Suns.

Wade did not even make it to the session, instead tied up in court in a matter related to a failed business interest.

O'Neal watched from the side, a day after breaking his nose late in Sunday's 95-87 victory over the Bulls.

And Cook was held out with the same shoulder ailment that forced him to skip the Chicago game.

Head coach Erik Spoelstra said after Monday's practice, working to arrange each court appearance so as not to interfere with his game schedule.

"It'll be available, and we'll be flexible and work around him," coach Erik Spoelstra said after Monday's practice at American Airlines Arena.

O'Neal also said to count on his presence against Phoenix.

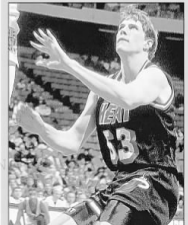

"It's very unlikely that I'll sit out," he said, "unless something happens between now and then, as far as the swelling."

O'Neal said he remains unsure of how he was injured, but said he is certain that he will not wear a mask, something he attempted when he previously broke his nose while playing for the Pacers.

"I tried to wear a mask and basically had a bad two, three minutes of not being able to see out of the sides," he said of quickly discarding it. "I could only see forward. So I took it off. I'm one to believe if you wear a mask in a game, you're going to get hit."

O'Neal's greater concern was there was no accompanying concussion, after sitting out the final two games of last season's playoffs due to one.

"I was a little bit nervous, obviously having a concussion before," he said. "I had some of the symptoms of a concussion, as far as blurriness in the vision and a head-

2009 MIAMI HEAT/MIAMI HEAT

When Heat was woeful, at least fans had Ogg

Editor's note: Post staff writer Brian Higgins, who covered the Heat for its first five seasons starting in 1988, remembers center Alan Ogg, who died Sunday. Before the Heat had Dwyane Wade, before it had Alonzo Mourning, even before it had Pat Riley, the Heat had Alan Ogg.

Ogg, a 7-foot-2 center out of Alabama-Birmingham, was a gentle giant who joined the team as an undrafted free agent in 1990 and played two seasons as a backup center in Miami.

Ogg, 43, died of complications from a heart valve infection in Birmingham, where he grew up. He had long suffered from heart problems.

Heat fans took to Ogg instantly upon his arrival. Whether it was his distinctive name, his long-legged gait or his underlying status — he admittedly did not have a great deal of respect on the court — many spectators stayed until the end of blowouts hoping to see Ogg play a few precious minutes. And as a young expansion team, the Heat suffered plenty of needs.

Paradoxically, fans seemed to find a sense of the everyday in Ogg. They could imagine themselves — if they were that height — doing the things he did despite not being extraordinarily athletic: blocking shots, setting screens and grabbing a few rebounds in brief moments on the court.

Ogg acted like an everyday, too. He had no ego and loved eliminating with fans during timeouts as at off-court functions.

Ogg was a pretty good player at UAB, averaging 6.4 points and 4.4 rebounds and setting a school record for career blocks (280) that still stands. In three NBA seasons, the third of which was split between Milwaukee and Washington, his numbers were a more modest 2.2 points and 1.7 rebounds.

ache, and my balance was a little bit off."

"I cleaned up pretty good and that's why I just tried to look into the light, to make sure, because normally when you have a concussion, you can't look into the light. That's where I knew I was fine and started concentrating a little bit more on the game."

As for Cook, trainer Jay Sola appears to be taking a cautious approach after the third-year guard tried to play through the strain last Friday in Indiana and shot 1 of 6, experiencing additional discomfort in ensuing days.

Knicks alter lineup, get first win

NEW YORK — David Lee scored a season-high 26 points, Al Harrington had 13 of his 34 in the fourth quarter, and the New York Knicks earned their first victory of the season by beating the New Orleans Hornets 117-111 on Monday night.

Chris Duhon finished with 18 points and nine assists for the Knicks (0-3), who were off to their worst start since dropping their first five games in 2008-09. But they played from ahead this time, after facing huge deficits in their previous games, then pulled away midway through the fourth quarter.

Larry Hughes added 20 points in his first start of the season after he didn't even play in the first two games. It was New York's second straight lineup change and third of the season.

Chris Paul had season highs of 32 points and 13 assists for the Hornets, who were coming off a

Suns at Heat

When: 7:30 p.m.

Where: American Airlines Arena, Miami

TV: Sun Sports

Radio: 760-AM, 940-AM

Tickets: They're available at the arena box office or through Ticketmaster at either (844) 388-8228 or www.ticketmaster.com.

Directions: Take Interstate 95 south. At Exit 28, turn right toward Miami Beach via I-395 E. Turn right at Exit 28, toward U.S. 1/Flamingo Boulevard. Turn right onto Northeast Second Avenue, then left onto Northeast Eighth Avenue. After the turn, the arena is across the street.

Box in Boston on Sunday

Other games

Boston 73, Nets 68: Gerald Wallace had 24 points and career-high 20 rebounds and Charlotte had new jersey without a point for more than 10 minutes in rallying for a 79-68 victory. The Heat's Jermaine O'Neal was on a 24-0 run leading the Heat and fourth quarters, winging out the Bobcats' terrible offense start. D.J. Augustin added 21 points in Raji's return from a wrist injury. The Nets dropped to 0-4 thanks to a brutal stretch where they lost either (844) 388-8228 or www.ticketmaster.com.

Heat 105, Hawks 95: Dwyane Wade had 23 points and Brook Lopez added 18 for the Heat.

Heat 105, Hawks 95: Dwyane Wade had 23 points and Brook Lopez added 18 for the Heat.

Heat 105, Hawks 95: Dwyane Wade had 23 points and Brook Lopez added 18 for the Heat.